

Keith Crow
Vice President, Operations

After beginning his career in construction for a custom home builder in California's Central Valley, Keith transitioned into commercial construction in 2006, when he became a key member of the Blach Project Management team. In this role, Keith developed unparalleled client relationships, delivering his projects seamlessly according to budget, schedule and overall client objectives. He transitioned into project executive, simultaneously overseeing several project management teams and assuming additional responsibilities relative to contracts, subcontractor and partner performance and project financial health.

Keith has been instrumental in firm operations, client relations, project management and company expansion efforts. He is actively involved with employee development throughout the firm and has identified key areas of growth, specifically with respect to contracts and skilled and trained workforce legislation. His strong leadership abilities and client relationships led to his promotion to vice president, operations, where he is immersed in strategic planning and staffing for all projects, staying closely aligned with Blach's field operations teams to ensure optimal results – for clients, partners and our project teams.

Keith attended Brown University and was a member of its National Championship-winning crew team. After graduating with a B.A. in Architectural History, he joined the United States Marine Corps as an artillery officer. He spent the first year as a forward observer and the following two years as a battery executive, where he oversaw 135 Marines and developed valuable management skills that he still employs today. By the time he was honorably discharged in 2003, Keith had achieved the rank of Captain and was awarded a Navy Achievement Medal.
